Tax funds transferred to correct bank account

By Christine Rizk
ANP Staff Writer

Responding to a motion by the city council, Treasurer John Lewkowicz placed money from the Tax Increment Finance Authority into the city investment fund.

The move came after the city council discovered that Lewkowicz mistakenly transferred $14,730.70 from 1985 T.I.F.A. summer taxes over to the treasurer of the authority instead of directly depositing the money into the city account.

The error meant that city money was initially placed into the hands of a private individual—the T.I.F.A. treasurer—and that the city lost the potential interest earned in the investment fund while the money remained in a non-interest bearing account for approximately 36 days.

"The money has always been in the bank," Lewkowicz said, shortly after the council questioned his motives at the Dec. 23 council meeting. "I have already placed the funds into the investment fund."

T.I.F.A. revenues represent the increment (increase) in taxes captured by the city due to new construction in a particular area.

The city has formed two T.I.F.A. districts—District #1 Wahrman Road and District #2 Wick Road for which the money captured from tax increments goes toward public improvements.

Much of the money is used to build sidewalks, streets, sewers and other infrastructure placement to attract new development.

According to the treasurer's records, the funds were transferred from a Manufund account to the city investment fund Dec. 26, more than one month after it was discovered that the funds had not been properly distributed.

According to Manufacturers Bank in Romulus, interest rates on a regular checking account, from where the money was eventually transferred, is 6 percent. Interest earned in the city investment fund is currently 7.5 percent.

Based upon calculations, the city lost approximately $18.42 in interest earned by not immediately placing the funds into the investment fund.

"I was told by Bob Mohr that the money should be placed into the two T.I.F.A. accounts," Lewkowicz said. "I was only following instructions from Mr. Mohr."

Mohr, the former city finance director, said last week that he merely "set up" the accounts for T.I.F.A. distributions.

"I never met with John and I never told him what to do with the T.I.F.A. tax dollars," Mohr said. "I met with Rich Viskochil and Matt (Raftary) and they told me they needed an accounting system set up. I wrote them a memo detailing the accounting system and gave John a copy. That's all I've had to deal with T.I.F.A."

In a memo dated Sept. 18, Mohr provided a list of tax-levying entity account numbers for the two T.I.F.A. districts.

It did not, Raftary said, suggest how Lewkowicz should disburse the current tax funds into the investment fund.

Raftary added that T.I.F.A. accounting is new to the city and that Lewkowicz, as with other city officials, may have been unfamiliar with accounting procedures.

The mishap caused the council to admit confusion about why Lewkowicz did not follow council instruction to deposit the funds directly into the investment fund.

"It does appear confusing," Mary Ann Banks said. "It just seems a little upsetting for one to be so concerned about donuts and flowers and not about what happened to $14,000. I think we need a CPA firm to look at exactly how the money should be handled."

Banks referred to an earlier accusation by Lewkowicz that the council was illegally spending tax-payer's money to purchase flowers and donuts for city functions.

Banks admitted that it was "never really quite clear" whether the funds should be handled by the T.I.F.A. board or by the city.

The city charter dictates, according to Mayor Beverly McAnally, that the city treasurer shall be the sole handler of city monies.

Jason Lovette, to whom Lewkowicz made out the two checks representing funds from the T.I.F.A. districts, said that he opened an account at Manufacturers Bank in December.

"I was following the instructions of the treasurer," Lovette said.

Lovette said the checks were not immediately placed into an interest-bearing account.

'Going forward' Palmer is 'Person of the Year'

By Christine Rizk
ANP Staff Writer

She's not one prone to self-acclaim nor is she given to accepting accolades of praise for work well done.

Joyce Palmer is a modest woman. She sees things that need done and she does it, at least that is the opinion of her friends and admirers.

It is, apparently, the opinion of the Romulus Chamber of Commerce as well for on Dec. 19 that organization named Palmer the 1986 Person of the Year.

"I was elated," Palmer said. "I've been nominated every year—winning this time is just an honor, a great honor."

A Romulus resident for 16 years, Palmer has never before been honored for her work in the community, which, according to those whom have followed Palmer's career, has been substantial.

"She's a lot like Bill Simonds," said Ken Whish, of Family Pharmacy in Romulus. "She has devoted countless hours to downtown development—many of which were thankless because nobody realizes all that she does. She is an unsung hero."

Simonds was the former owner of Bilmar's Supermarket and former president of the Central Business District Association. His name, according to residents and officials, is synonymous with dedication to the community.

"I don't need the thanks," Palmer insisted. "It's just a good feeling inside to find the time to do something that's important."

Time is something Palmer has learned to manage well considering she once operated her own business (Arc Realty) within the city, is a past president and board member of the Romulus Chamber of Commerce and current secretary for the Central Business District Association.

In fact, when the Chamber members wanted to announce that Palmer won the title, they had to entice her into helping plan a holiday party in order to ensure that she would be present.

It was Palmer who first initiated the idea of choosing someone from the community who best represented the ideal "person" of the year in 1980.

Founded on the premise that the city ought to recognize the person who demonstrated his or her dedication to the community, the award has, in the past, gone to Bill Simonds, Doug Baum, Carl Morris and Jason Lovette.

To find her name placed among those who stand as pillars of the community has not changed Palmer's attitude toward her role in Romulus.

At most, she said, it stirred her to tears over having been selected to an elite group.

More importantly, she added, it demonstrates that perseverance and faith in oneself does provide rewards.

In 1971, Palmer set herself up for what could have been a major disappointment but has since served to prove her theory—that perseverance does pay.

She and several neighbors became involved in the Meadows Subdivision project, a task that included attempting to revitalize an area plagued with 147 boarded up houses in the area east of Middlebelt Road near Harrison Road.

The group contacted federal officials in an attempt to remedy the blighted area and found themselves embroiled in an affair that culminated, in 1975, with Palmer being selected to head the Romulus Neighborhood Center in that subdivision.

Within two years, according to Palmer, a majority of the homes were unboarded.

Today, the area stands as a testimony to hard work and dedication giving way to a thriving subdivision.

As a result of her success in the Meadows Subdivision, Palmer was approached with job offers by several real estate firms.

She resigned her city position in 1978 to pursue her career in real estate but not without promising to lend her hand in community affairs, including the Chamber of Commerce.

"Romulus has always been a part of my family's life," she said. "Even though I was working outside the city, I still maintained strong ties to Romulus."

Three active sons allowed her to remain busy in Cub Scouts, Little League, hockey games, PTA and other volunteer work.

She once began, during her tenure with the city, a 4-H program for troubled kids in her neighborhood.

Palmer was also an integral part in the formulation of "Downtown Days", including the first Romulus Michigan Week Festival held every May for the past three years.

Perhaps her greatest victory thus far has been the revitalization of the Chamber of Commerce.

"We were almost to the point of being defunct," Palmer said. "When I became president, I went to the board and offered them my Arc Realty building rent-free so we could back on our feet."

Palmer said her motto 'go forward' will help prompt her to do more for a community where "a lot has yet to be done."

"I think it all started with the Meadows project," she said, reflecting over her days as a novice 'go-getter'. "We found out then that it worked if you really, really believe in something and in yourself."

School district test scores show continued increase

By Christine Rizk
ANP Staff Writer

Following a state trend, students in the Romulus School District increased their math and reading skills in most levels of testing, according to statistics released from the Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP).

Seventh-grade math scores were the only scores to show a decrease over last year, according to Superintendent William Bedell.

Students in grades four, seven and 10 are given MEAP tests every October to assess their reading and mathematic ability.

Mathematics questions range from whole number and fractions to geometry. Reading tests consist of vocabulary, comprehension and reading skills.

Of the seventh-grade students tested, 39.4 percent demonstrated comprehension of at least 75 percent of the math questions, including computational and conceptual skills.

That figure represents a decrease of 3.3 percent over scores last year.

In the area of reading comprehension, 76.8 percent of the students successfully completed three-quarters of the test. That figure shows an increase of 2.3 percent over 1984 figures.

"It is a state-wide trend," Bedell said. "Math scores are going down in general."

"Our kids do well computationally and poor conceptually. It's something we will have to examine more closely."

Fourth-grade students demonstrated a slight increase in reading comprehension.

At least 69.4 percent of those students tested successfully completed at least three-quarters of the test questions. Last year, fourth-grade reading scores were in the 65 percentile.

Tenth-grade students demonstrated the greatest increase in reading and math comprehension, according to figures released.

MEAP math scores at that grade level indicated a 4.1 percent jump, from 55.0 percent of those students tested who achieved at least 75 percent ranking, to 59.1 in 1985.

Reading comprehension scores for 10th-graders rose from 70.9 percent in 1984 to 71.7 percent last year.

Bedell said MEAP scores have traditionally risen over the last ten years since the tests have been administered due to a "re-emphasis" of basic skills in reading and arithmetic in all grade levels.

"We're following a state trend," he said. "We're going back to the basics."

Bedell warned against comparing the Romulus School District, which traditionally ranks lower in assessment scores than surrounding school districts.

He was, in fact, voicing the concern of State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Dr. Phillip Runkel.

Runkel warned against comparisons between districts saying that "test results should never be used to compare one school against another or one school district with another..."

In a recent article submitted to the Michigan School Board Journal, Bedell indicated that Romulus Community Schools

"chronically appear as one of the bottom districts in Wayne County...despite concerted efforts by our staff to help students do better..."

"... Student expectations are dampened by the feeling that we will certainly be at the bottom of the heap no matter how hard we try," he continued.

Bedell said MEAP tests are formulated to test students against "absolute standards" and not against each other.

The tests should be used, he added, to help provide data for school districts in an effort to make curriculum changes.

The school district did, in fact, employ the use of a testing consultant, Dr. Warren Williams from Eastern Michigan University, to help decipher and analyze 1984 MEAP scores.

Williams' investigation indicated that approximately one-third of the Romulus students tested were students in the district for less than three years prior to taking the 1984 MEAP test.

The discovery brought to light the idea that student mobility, in addition to student skills upon entry into the district, play an important role in comprehension of MEAP tests.

Further investigation by Williams indicated that the non-mobile population in the district did "substantially better" on the test than did the mobile student population.

Bedell further stated that since a "significant" portion of Romulus students are mobile, the influence of the district on the student prior to testing may be minimal thus leading to lower test scores.

Firearm charge dropped

A circuit court judge dismissed a felony firearm charge against Romulus Police Officer James Khoury ruling that the charge was inapplicable when dealing with police officers.

The ruling means that Khoury will face only a manslaughter charge for the June 27, 1985 death of James Hester, 25, a resident of Romulus Birch Run Townhouses.

Tim Baughman, Deputy Chief for Civil and Appeals court, said Monday that the prosecution is considering appealing the decision.

According to Michigan law, anyone convicted of a felony firearm charge must serve a mandatory two-year sentence in addition to any other sentence.

"The judge threw out the charge," Baughman said. "He found it inapplicable for police officers in this situation. We will decide this week if we are going to appeal."

Baughman said the decision to appeal could offer several options: an appeals judge could decide Judge Thomas J. Brennan was wrong in dismissing the charge or he or she could refuse to hear the motion.

The decision to reverse the lower court ruling could take up to one month, Baughman said.

Khoury appeared in Wayne County Circuit Court Dec. 16 for a pre-trial hearing at which time March was set as the tentative trial date.

The June shooting stirred controversy in the community when Khoury was accused of using excessive force to break-up a fight between Hester and another resident of Birch Run.

According to Khoury's testimony in 35th District Court before Judge James Garber, he was threatened by Hester who wielded a knife when he attempted to intercede in the fight.

Hester died of a bullet wound to the left temple, according to autopsy reports.

Rock photographer achieves success

By STEVE O'LEARY
ANP Special Writer

Hidden away in the spacious hinterlands of Romulus is a rather unspectacular-looking building which houses the studios of Rockart Int., a concert photography business started in 1975 by Belleville's own Bob Alford, who stands today as one of the top three concert and commercial photographers in the country.

Unknown to the usually quiet natives of Romulus, behind the soundproof walls of the studio/workshop, it is not unusual for a photo session with the likes of ZZ Top, Cheap Trick or Hall & Oates to end in a jam session and, later, hangovers all around.

Alford, 31, travelled around the country in his youth with his father, a doctor, and remembers taking photos of his father in such traditional places as the Grand Canyon.

He recalls his first camera fondly. "I was in the 1st grade at the old Rawsonville Elementary School and I had this little plastic toy camera, which I'd use to take pictures of my friends during recess and later of course I'd show off the shots to the class. Some of my first photographic endeavors were of school chums standing around storm drains!"

So, how did a kid with a toy plastic camera, standing in a schoolyard end up touring Japan with Cheap Trick while that band was the biggest rock group in the world?

"Like anything else, it didn't come overnight. I graduated to a Kodak Instamatic in 1964, and used it to shoot photos of bands like Paul Revere & the Raiders when they would play local fairs and stuff like that," Alford says.

"Later, I moved on to a Canon F-1 camera, and have been faithful to that brand ever since. From 1968 until 1973 I did a lot of automotive photography, and those were the shots of mine that were first published in magazines like 'Hot Rod.' I did stills, shots of engines, and when the time came, I would cover races.

"The thing to remember is, 'Alford says,' is that even while I was shooting cars, music was my first and greatest love. In 1973, through a long chain of events, I was invited to take photos of the opening night of the Who's 'Quadrophenia' tour at the Los Angeles Forum. I still remember it, it stands out as being one of the best shows I've ever seen. And to be that close, in the photographers pit, in front of the crowd was just an incredible feeling. It was Thanksgiving and I was stuffed with turkey and stuff, you know, and I was amazed at (Peter) Townshend's leaps and lunges with his guitar."

From there, Alford once again came back to Belleville, "where my roots are. I was raised there by my grandparents," Alford says. His concert photography took off, being regularly published in Concert Magazine, Circus, and the Birmingham-based Creem

"A lot of people have asked me why I don't move to one of the coasts, where most of the music is happening, but I've always found that the Midwest is perfect, because most of the larger bands begin their tours here, before mid-size crowds, and work their way around the country to the bigger markets. For me then, I could easily get opening night shots and send them out to the magazines, who want the big bands on the cover while the tour is still going on, not after," says Alford, adding that the Romulus location, which is close to the airport, gives him an easy road to travel "and, when I'm set for a session I just pick up the band at the airport and it's a short ride to the studio for them."

Inside, the studio comes alive, with plush black carpeting, art deco dinosaurs and even a bar, complete with a microwave and a milkshake-mixer. Large, glossy photos line the walls, all of them Alford's work, many of them reproduced from magazine covers. There is also a complete set-up of guitars, bass and drums should any of the bands feel the urge to jam, well, they can, often with Alford sitting in on drums. In the middle of the studio is a highly-lit area with numerous backdrops and props.

"When I work in the studio, I like to use a lot of different lighting effects, such as strobes, colored lights and a lot of back-lighting," Alford says. His success is unquestionable.

Bob Alford, 31, stands posed before a backdrop of glossy photos of rock stars in his Romulus studio. Alford said he is lucky to be able to "combine a passion" of true loves - music and photography as successfully as he has done.

His cover photography has graced albums by everyone from Stevie Nicks to Billy Idol, and he has been presented two gold and one platinum album (marking sales of one million copies) from both ZZ Top and, strangely enough, another for an action shot of Mick Jagger taken in Detroit at Masonic Temple and used as a 45 sleeve in Japan.

"It's really great, and this business has given me a lot. Not everyone can combine a passion for their true loves (in this case, music and photography) and make a living at it. I've had a lot of breaks, but the most important thing - and anyone trying to make a living at this will learn - is to become a sort of salesman. You have to find out what the band's manager's needs are and take care of them, sell your product in positive ways," Alford says.

"Now, some of my best friends are musicians, Dave Edmunds, Billy Gibbons of ZZ Top, Rick, Robin and Bun E. Carlos from Cheap Trick, and lots of others," says Alford, recalling the crazy tour of Japan with Cheap Trick ("It was incredible. It was like the Beatles, with girls everywhere trying to grab hair, clothes, anything..."), eating dinner with Ted Nugent ("he'd pass around a plate of ribs, asking if anyone wanted anymore, then dumping this gigantic mound on his own plate"), along with many, many other amusing anecdotes.

When not shooting stars, flying to New York or California to work on book deals (Rolling Stone Press recently released a book of Alford's ZZ Top photos, unfortunately, the text by Debra Frost leaves much to be desired), Bob is usually in his darkroom working on touch-ups or working out his next project. It's obvious that he greatly enjoys what he does. He's proud of his work (the new issue of Creem, with the John Cougar cover is his), but not a braggart in any sense of the word.

No doubt, modesty has helped Alford in his dealings through the years, but, unlike most in his position, he'll always take the time to give some help or encouragement to those learning the trade. His secret? There is none. He's just a real nice guy.

Homestead tax forms delayed

By Christine Rizk
ANP Staff Writer

Homestead Property Tax Credit forms will not be available for at least two weeks for those persons who qualify to receive refunds from the state, according to Matthew Raftary, the city assessor.

Credit forms, according to Raftary, are usually sent out by the federal government to coincide with the 1040 forms.

Residents who qualify--senior citizens, those who are handicapped, an active military person or veteran's spouse--will be notified by mail that the forms are available at city hall, Raftary said.

Until that time, Raftary suggested that seniors and others wait before bringing their tax forms into the assessor's office.

The Homestead Property Tax Credit provides refunds of a portion of property taxes to some tax payers.

Once the forms are available, eligible persons will be asked to bring the following information to the assessor's office: 1. Social security number 2. Interest amounts and statements 3. Pension benefits 4. Social security benefits (statements if available)

5. Veterans disability compensation (statements if available)
6. The amount of accident and health insurance premiums paid by you for yourself and your family. (A portion of auto insurance may be health insurance).
7. All other household income.
8. Your Summer and Winter tax bills.
9. Your total heating costs for calendar year 1985.

Senior citizens must be 65 years-of-age by Dec. 31, 1985 or be the surviving spouse of a person who was age 65 or older at the time of death.
Eligibility as a handicapper includes paraplegic, quadriplegic or hemiplegic on Dec. 31, 1985 and must be partially or completely paralyzed from the neck down, in both legs or on one side of the body.

Raftary warned that only those persons not filing income tax returns are eligible for the homestead tax credit.
For further information, contact the assessor's office between 9 a.m. - 12 p.m. and 2 p.m. - 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at 941-0666.

On Dec. 15, 1985, Joyce Maton graduated from Eastern Michigan University summa cum laude with a 4.0 grade point average, earning her bachelor's degree in early childhood education.

It was the culmination of a long cherished dream that had been postponed often since high school first for financial reasons, later for marriage and to help husband Richard finish his final two years of college at Western Michigan University and finally for her children Rob, 16, Ashley, 14, and Benjy, now 12.

She entered Wayne Commu-

ity College in January of 1982 and transferred to Eastern Michigan University in September of that year after being awarded a scholarship that was renewed for each year thereafter.

Joyce was honored at an open house following the graduation exercises. She was greeted by more than 100 family members and friends. Guests included her sister, Betsy Akers, and family from Indiana and her brother Bob Kreie who traveled from Maine and surprised her for this special occasion.

Congratulations Joyce and best wishes for 1986.

The Belleville Area Historical Society will meet Wednesday, Jan. 8 at 7:30 p.m. in Quirk School, 46270 Ayres Road. If you are a history buff come join them and if you're not, come anyway. They're all a part of history in the making.

The Rev. George E. Spencer has been elected to the Board of Trustees of Adrian College. He will represent the Detroit Conference of The United Methodist Church.

Spencer has served The United Methodist Church in Belleville since 1972. He has a master of divinity degree and a master's degree in administration. He and his wife Sharon have three daughters and one son.

The Brown Family, David and wife Martha, went home to Muskegon to spend the Christmas holidays.

They have been residents of this area for the past 10 years but both have family ties to Muskegon.

David Brown is the oldest of five children and Martha is the youngest of five so it was quite a gathering of the clans.

Part of the celebration was spent with Martha's brothers and sisters and their families. The traditional Christmas feast was enjoyed with David's parents and his family members.

George and Florence Hunter of Ecorse Road, Van Buren, would like to thank all of the people who helped to make Christmas a happier time for the needy families in the area. A lot of hard work was involved in the collecting, sorting, packing and delivering of the food baskets but no complaints were heard.

Almost a ton of food items were delivered to about 100 families right up to Christmas Day.

MANUFACTURER PLAYS GAME WITH CAMERA REPAIR

Your response to my column are appreciated. Keep in touch with me at 42245 Ann Arbor Road, PMC Center, Suite 109LL, Plymouth, MI 48170 or (313) 455-8892. Dear Letter Writer:

I sent my camera in for repair in June of 1985. It is now November and I can't get any action. Please help me write and get some action.

Sincerely, DB

Dear Camera Manufacturer:

My Christmas present was the referenced Weathermatic A camera from my uncle.

In June of 1985, the wind mechanism on the camera stopped working. My parents and I consulted with the large department store from which it was purchased and were told that this was not an uncommon repair job and the camera should be returned to you to be fixed. As indicated on the repair order, (copy enclosed for your convenience), you received my camera in your offices on July 9, 1985.

I have heard nothing from you until the receipt of the repair order, indicating that I must produce proof of purchase or remit the amount due of $40.50.

It appears as though you are holding my camera as "ransom" for your repair charges.

I do not understand your need for proof of purchase as to my knowledge there is no question of its ownership, i.e. unless I owned it, I would have had to have stolen it from someone.

Please respond promptly as you are in possession of my property and it is my feeling that you are using unreasonable and harassing methods.

You received it from me. Please return it to me.

Sincerely, DB

RESOLUTION:

Within a week, the manufacturer returned the repaired camera to DB with an apologetic letter. What would have happened had she not written? Would they have continued to hold the camera indefinitely?

chef larry janes

Once again, it's diet time

Have you ever removed your wristwatch, then taken off your shoes, placed all the loose change from your pocket on the table, slipped off your belt, hopped on the scale and exhaled praying that you would at least stay the same weight?

Or, do you blame it on your sister from Toronto who brought goodies and forced you to try every last piece of homemade fudge and cookie? After being employed with a major international weight control organization as their executive chef, believe me, I've heard them all.

For most of us, the answer to the extra pounds that creep up on the heels of gastronomic indiscretions is going on a "serious" diet - a rigid, boring, punishing reminder of our human frailties. Saying no to good food is a trial under any circumstances, but what can a food writer, chef, caterer and restaurateur do when they must stare at spectacular creations on an everyday routine?

Certainly some kind of discipline must be necessary for people professionally confronted with endless temptation. Forget the endless novena to the gods for plain yogurt, cottage cheese and diet soda. (although, with the addition of Nutrasweet, the stuff is at least palatable.)

After a little research, I found that most professional chefs and writers forget about diets, in general. They never crash diet, they never deny themselves what they really enjoy, but they do practice something I learned a few years ago while judging the National Chili Cookoffs: rely constantly on sensible eating and carefully monitored amounts.

Your standard gourmands like Jacques Pepin, noted author, chef and teacher, is frequently winned and dined while "on the road". He will generally limit his intake on those occasions because everyone and his brother, it seems, is interested in preparing something "outrageously calorie-laden" just to impress. While at home, lots of fresh fish and vegetables are de rigeur. Joyce Chen, renowned cook, author, teacher, restaurateur and head of a thriving import business, eats for energy, not gourmandise. (Sure, and I believe in fairies.) If a few extra pounds do appear, she immediately switches to steamed rather than fried and sauteed foods.

New York Times food critic Craig Claiborne can't stand to be full. When confronted with something he loves, he has no guilt about leaving food. (I'll bet he makes the dishwashers really happy!) Gael Green, the New York Magazine food critic, periodically fasts and occasionally eats "very little" (stuff like yogurt, tuna - ah, my kind of woman!) After a big dinner, her trick is to dance away till dawn. (So that's how those cuties at Jason's stay so svelte!) Like many other food professionals, her trick is to never finish everything on the plate. That's fine Gael, but my mama always reminded us of those "poor starving people..." when we didn't finish our carrots and peas.

Not trying to place myself in a category with those, aforementioned peers, I will again make my New Year's resolution to try and get rid of those "last 10 pounds". I will try to forget my reliance on tuna (are you listening StarKist?) and will instead prepare nutritious, healthy meals with the emphasis on proper preparation.

One thing I can report is that we all agree; good eating means not overeating.

By the way, did you know that you weigh more upstairs than downstairs because of the humidity and barometric pressure? I wonder if they'd let me weigh in in the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel?

State scores are school 'report cards' to taxpayers

The Michigan Education Assessment Program testing scores have been made public...and once again there are those criticizing the results and the public interpretation of them.

For taxpayers these test results can serve as a "report card" on the district in which they live. Are the schools and the educators in whom they have placed their trust, their money and more importantly, the responsibility for the education of the children, doing the job?

The tests are administered each September to students throughout the state in fourth, seventh and 10th grade. The pupils demonstrate the level of skill they have attained in both mathematics and reading, during the examinations and a compilation of state scores ranks each district as to the level at which students are performing.

What the tests are designed to do is the thing most often overlooked by parents and school officials. These tests were designed as a tool...as a means for schools to learn what they are doing right and what they must learn to do better.

Too often administrators in the districts take the testing as a personal criticism of the job being done--or feel that it is necessary to explain the mitigating circumstances which might make the results less than flattering in their particular circumstance.

This is unfortunate. Testing has long been accepted as a means of teaching. A demonstration of skill level is administered in every classroom, every week as a means of gauging the performance and accuracy of students...why then is it not just as accurate to test the district, the administrators and the teachers themselves to help determine the level of their competency?

If the results are not as satisfactory as the taxpayers, students and parents deserve, then administrators should accept those results and help to make changes which might better serve the young minds in their care.

The state tests should not be used as a measure of one district against another, although they often are interpreted in that manner. The tests should only be used as a measure of the success or failure of the present methods, techniques and policies of the district. Are the students in a low-income, under-financed, over-populated transient community going to do as well as those in an affluent, highly-taxed district? In all likelihood, no. But those students can show improvement against the scores of the previous years--they can show an increased skill level as opposed to the testing individual students took in the previous grades...and that should be the useage of the tests, and is the purpose for which they were designed.

Comparisons are bound to be made...but they should be made fairly and the report cards presented by the state testing each year to the taxpayers and parents should be examined just as they are when students bring them home. Would it be helpful to compare the grades of a third grade arithmetic pupil to those of the algebra student in the 10th grade?

We think not. We think that these are important tests and important scores...but we think the interpretation and use of this learning tool has degenerated into something never intended.

Tools such as this are effective--but only when those using them have been taught their proper application. It is very difficult to pound a nail with a screwdriver.

Beautiful downtown Wayne!

The City of Wayne, it would appear, is getting ready to explode with commercial property development.

Long been considered a rather sedentary neighbor as retail development and industry expanded in other communities, Wayne has suddenly become the eye of the hurricane of development. The new plans and options for a strip mall at Michigan Avenue and Wayne Road, the commercial development planned for downtown and the announcement this week of plans for a six-story office building next to the nearly unused parking structure should have residents and other local businessmen enthused and excited about the possibilities in their town.

Wayne is a town which satisfies the needs of the citizenry, evident in the recent return to office of all incumbent councilmembers and the election, again, of long-time mayor Pat Norton. The upturn in downtown development can be credited to these men and to the efforts and qualifications of the men they employ to secure this type of growth for their city. City Manager Tom Daily and Assistant City Manager John Zech have the experience, credentials and drive to perform the difficult, seemingly impossible task of luring industry and development into the small, quiet community of Wayne. They are, obviously, doing a commendable and exemplary job.

And during this courtship of developers, the members of the council were not afraid to say no to those plans they thought might not serve the city in the best manner possible. For that, they took a great deal of criticism. They were also held accountable for the closing of the 3M plant in their town...something about which they could do nothing.

Will those who complained, criticized and speculated about the culpability of the council members in these closings be there to congratulate them on the announcement of the new shopping area, the new manufacturing offices and the new high-rise office building? We would hope so.

The officials in Wayne are an interesting and divergent group who have demonstrated their ability to work together, cooperatively, for the betterment of the community as a whole. That is no more clearly demonstrated than in the "sudden" announcements of the projects soon to be constructed within the city limits, and more specifically, with the downtown development. The developments are of course not sudden at all, but projects the officials and city representatives have worked on, negotiated and solicited for months.

The remarkable consideration shown for the existing businesses in the city is also a tribute to the leadership in the city. It is carefully noted that the projects approved are done so only after questions regarding the impact on existing merchants are answered. Development will be completed downtown with an eye on the impact on the established business and on the new.

It is, indeed, beautiful downtown Wayne.

Searching for our roots . . .

It was March, 1886 when the very first edition of the Belleville Enterprise was published. For nearly 100 years now, the Belleville Enterprise has brought the news of the area to those in the community...a full century of service to this area.

We will mark this anniversary with a special edition of the Belleville paper, which we will insert in each of our publications. Our pride in this anniversary is difficult, even for us, to express. And as we work on the special edition, going through the old papers, a sense of history and pride touches even the newest of us.

We are seeking help in our pursuit of our history. We are looking for ancient photos, depicting Belleville and environs as it was when this paper first began and through the years we have served the city. We are seeking any old copies of our publication that people may have stored away and forgotten.

We need to speak to those who have an interest in the history of the community, to those who have been in business, who have served in the schools, hospitals or government in the area. We need to know all we can discover about these entities and the people of the community as they grew during the years.

We are hoping our anniversary edition will bring alive the history of the area for everyone who reads it...for while it was and re-

The man with the mark

Each January, as we begin a new year, there is a tendency to pause momentarily to reassess all matters pertaining to our existence.

When we consider world affairs, we become cognizant of the marked differences between a few years ago and the present. The Soviet Union, champion of the world Communist movement, has obviously taken a new approach toward winning souls to its cause. The U.S.S.R. is a totalitarian land where the government hides the truth from its own people as a way of life.

The Communist Manifesto is their Bible, and it teaches that they are to be dedicated to the task at hand: World domination.

They also subscribe to the philosophy that the end justifies the means. The end, of course, is the defeat of the west and capitalism. Now, this is not news to any of us, but it seems we all need to periodically reappraise our situation lest we forget.

Now comes Mikhail Gorbachev, who, unlike his predecessors, knows the ways of western culture and is proceeding with his business of beating us at our own game.

Most recently, he consented to allow President Reagan to "speak" to the Russian people. In exchange, he was given the opportunity to "speak" to our populace. Without the boring details, let me simply suggest that such an exchange is hardly an apples-to-apples opportunity. Most importantly, Gorbachev now demonstrates a desire to play in the world opinion arena and his TV role is yet another example of that purpose.

He is playing Pied Piper with our allies in an effort to disassemble our mutual defense pacts and has even offered a "protection" contract to our allies if they will agree to "stay out of it." Of course our allies would never be so foolish...right? Let us not forget Neville Chamberlain who thought he could dance with the devil they called Hitler. Let us not forget the outcome of that foolhardy pursuit.

Frequently now, "Nightline," a news magazine type show airs discussions regarding world issues, with a spokesperson from the Soviet Union as well as one from the United States. The Soviet representatives credibly and articulately discuss the world issues of the day.

Phil Donohue recently aired a program with an audience in Moscow and America in which both sides were given a chance to be heard. Give me a break, folks, what is the viewing audience of "Nightline" in the U.S.S.R. or of Donahue for that matter in the eastern bloc countries?

I find such programming enlightening, but the Communists are not playing in this world opinion game to help us win supporters. This whole melodrama is like an old Hollywood "B" movie, where you can see exactly where the predictable plot is taking you and yet you cannot believe that the obvious ending will be played out to the foregone conclusion...but it does.

And so we watch Gorbachev on television mugging for the cameras and yet arming the madman Moammar Khadafy to the teeth in his pursuit of innocent children in airports. This is the same gentle spirit who helped in the near assassination of the Pope.

I'm reminded of the movie portrayal of the coming of the anti-Christ in the movie "The Omen." Jason, the subject, has the sign of nine or 333 as a birthmark hidden beneath his hair. Gorbachev's "mark" is as obvious as his blatant attempts to sway world opinion while holding Sakharov as a political prisoner, while Soviets massacre Afghanistan for the sake of securing a warm-water seaport, while the U.S.S.R. exports arms and provides guerilla training in Cuba to conquer Central America.

The Bible claims one will come and speak of peace...but there will be no peace. It prophesizes that people will believe in him and follow.

Ronald Reagan may have mishandled many situations in the eyes of some of us, but he has pushed us to remain militarily strong. The war-machine syndrome is at best a hollow pursuit, void of lofty purpose at its core, but it may be the most plausible course open to us against such a savvy, smooth-talking spokesman as Gorbachev.

Let us seek peace with all our power. Let us never fail to negotiate or compromise where we must. Perhaps it is God's hands and perhaps our feeble attempts to control our own destiny will result in a nuclear dismantling. Perhaps there will be a final battle as the Bible suggests, between good and evil...and perhaps Armageddon symbolized in the good book will, in fact, be fought on horseback. Perhaps the man with the mark is here or perhaps his coming is an omen.

See you next week.

wall street the week ahead

by ron ferenczi

The Federal Reserve Board's monetary policy is running into resistance. The efforts to increase economic activity has been met with minimal success: consumers are reluctant to continue their spending spree, and producers remain cautious about inventory buildup.

For this week, the market seems divided between bulls and bears. A reasonable argument can be made for either case. The short-term traders, willing to sell, may be the major influence early in the session. However, a major sell-off will bring short-term buyers back into the market. Intermediate- and long-term traders will use any market strength to close positions and move to the sidelines.

For this week, I see the market opening mixed to down. With the holiday season behind us, all major players will be present in the market. However, it may take several days for the market to determine the economic effects of holiday spending. I expect the market to change direction several times, and end the session flat to down.

Eaton Rapids earns Salem mat title

By DAVID CONLEY
ANP Staff Writer

Ever the good hosts, the wrestlers of Plymouth Salem High School made sure the other 15 teams at the Salem Invitational tournament were having a good time, and then had a good time of their own by placing third in the meet.

Eaton Rapids won the team title last Saturday with a score of 213 points, with Detroit Catholic Central second (187.5 points) and Salem third (172 points).

Other area teams in the running were Wayne, which finished sixth with 51.5 points, Westland John Glenn (tied for seventh with 48 points), Belleville (10th with 42 points), and Plymouth-Canton (12th with 32.5 points).

Inkster plays host to Swedish hockey club

By DAVID CONLEY
ANP Staff Writer

The Inkster Civic Arena gained a little international flavor last Sunday, as the Michigan National Hockey Club defeated Sweden's Morum Gois, 8-5, in an exhibition game.

The game was the final stop in a seven-game Michigan tour for the Gois, a contingent of 16- and 17-year-olds who visited America as the guests of the Taylor Hockey Association.

According to Jerry Carnaghi, director of the Inkster Hockey and Arena Association, the visit is part of an ongoing exchange program that has lasted eight years.

"The program is a friendship exchange between Taylor and

The third-place finish by Salem was sparked by a "brother double" and some strong wrestling in the lower weight classes. The Rocks got a second-place finish from Fred Calma in the 105-pound class, and another second-place performance from Kevin Freeman in the 134-pound group.

Sandwiched in between were the first-place victories by the Dameron brothers, Dennis and Dave. Dennis won the 114-pound finals, and his brother answered with a first-place performance in the 128-pound division.

Dave pinned all four of his opponents and won the tourney's Outstanding Wrestler award, as he has at several other tournaments this year en route to a No. 1 state ranking. Westland John Glenn 145-pounder Dan Schmansky also enjoyed a fine tournament, finishing second. Belleville star Darrell Elder also won a second-place, but a loss to archrival Mike Murdock (Montrose) in the 157-pound finals ruined his bid for a fourth consecutive Outstanding Wrestler award.

The tourney ran smoothly and provided plenty of wrestling action; host coach Ron Krueger of Salem was quick to give credit to the parents and volunteers who helped out.

"It was a really, really good tournament," Krueger said. "Our parents did a real nice job, the referees were outstanding, and everything was organized. I don't think I've been to a more smoothly-run tournament."

Belated gift Wayne wins holiday cage crown

By CURT JORDET
ANP Staff Writer

"We're playing pretty well right now," said Henry after senior forward Rod Sonnoms hit a 22-foot jumper from the corner at the buzzer to beat CC. "But we still have a lot of room for improvement."

"Our next four games (including a home encounter with Belleville last night) are against league teams, and if we can win those everyone in our league will have at least two losses. Only then will I be able to say that we're sitting pretty."

Regardless of Henry's cautious optimism, however, Wayne proved that it could play ball with a physical, pressing team and accomplished the second goal in Henry's list of four pre-season objectives. The Zebras did it for the second consecutive time in the tourney by overcoming a halftime deficit with a strong third quarter performance.

After falling behind, 14-10, after the first quarter of play, Wayne managed to rattle off 16 points in the second stanza. Catholic Central countered with 16 of their own, however, and took a tight 30-26 lead into the locker room at intermission.

That's when Henry decided to make a few minor adjustments. "It seemed as though we were a little lax in our defense in the first half," he said, "so I decided to switch our man-to-man coverage from half-court to full-court in the second half, and it apparently worked."

and point guard Spencer Williams applying added pressure to Catholic Central's big guns, Wayne pulled even with their rivals at 37-all entering the final quarter and set the stage for Sonnoms' last-second heroics.

The key proved to be the defensive work of Robinson and Williams. The two held the scoring tandem of Shawn McClorey and Paul Tavana — who combined for all but six of Catholic Central's 30 first-half points — to three meager free throws after the intermission.

With their high-scoring duo having trouble offensively, the rest of the CC team could only bang home 13 second-half points, and the Zebras inched their way to victory.

Belleville edges D.C. on Gratham's last shot

Belleville's Chris Grantham sank a "spinning layup" with two seconds left on the clock to give the Tigers and Coach Leon Birdyshaw a 61-60 victory over host, Dearborn Divine Child, Friday night.

Grantham's basket came seconds before Divine Child had an opportunity to salt the decision away. The Falcons had a one-and-one situation that they failed to capitalize upon. Belleville got the rebound, the ball eventually getting into Grantham's hands at the top of the key where he powered his way to the basket for the decisive two points.

Outscored 21-12 in the final period, Belleville blew a 10-point third quarter lead. Laddion Tait gave the Tigers some breathing room when he tossed in eight of his 17 points to help erase a 30-29 halftime deficit and put winners ahead 49-39 for three periods.

"We played a good all-around game," said Birdyshaw whose club carried a 3-2 record into last night's Wolverine "A" Conference contest at Wayne Memorial. Wayne, the defending conference champ, is undefeated and coming off of an impressive win over Catholic Central at the Howell Holiday Invitational.

"We know that they (Wayne) are tough," commented Birdyshaw. "It will be an excellent opportunity for us to test our abilities."

Metro Stamp, Little Bill's skate to Over 30 lead

Metro Stamp and Little Bill's began the new year with impressive victories that lifted them into the driver's seats of their respective divisions in the Wayne-Westland Over 30 Hockey Conference.

Metro Stamp breezed past V.D. Roofing 7-2 for its ninth victory in 16 starts as Mark Santoni rattled the net for one goal and picked up one assist.

ray tallied for the winners. Tim Potts and Keith Middaugh got the assists.

Harlow Tire moved up in the standings as it blanked Johnson's Bakery, 4-0. Gary Stanbury scored twice while Sam Jaffre and Gene Tauriainen rounded out the scoring with a goal apiece. Layne Cardinal picked up two assists while Tom DiLaura and Doug Hack-the game with 18 points, but was hounded throughout the contest by a tight, pressing zone defense. Robinson's total was almost seven points below his season average.

Sonnoms added 12 for the victors, but the most important came with the game on the line and one second left on the clock. The shot brought an expected smile to Henry's face and added the tournament championship to the "city" championship that Wayne won earlier in the season with a victory over Westland John Glenn.

"I set four goals for this team before the season began," Henry said later. "We wanted to win the city championship and the Christmas championship,

Romulus rules Riverview mat meet

Claiming three gold medals and a score of others, Romulus wrestlers dominated the 1986 version of the Riverview Invitational last Saturday.

The victory came in the wake of an impressive Romulus win at Ypsilanti Lincoln.

"I am very pleased and proud of this team," said Romulus coach Wayne Schimming. "We have come a long way, and there's still a lot of tough wrestling ahead of us."

Romulus amassed 198 points at Riverview, beating out a field of 15 other area teams. The Eagles piled up more than 45 points over their closest competitor, Southgate Aquinas, which had 150.5.

Following Romulus and Aquinas in the final standings were Melvindale (144), Lincoln Park (139.5), Avondale (125.5), Novi (112.5), Ypsilanti Lincoln (81.5), Riverview (76.5), Woodhaven (71), Gladwin (67.5), Southgate (66), Trenton (59.5), Divine Child (56), Dearborn Heights Annapolis (48.5), Carlson (24) and Wyandotte (12).

Time to trim down: Dairy Council offers dieting tips

By RAY DAY
ANP Staff Writer

So you ate one too many frosted, expertly-decorated holiday cookies this Christmas. Or perhaps, you quickly devoured that last crumb of fruit cake. And, all in all, your diet has gone by the "waistside". The Michigan Dairy Council has some help.

Re-implementing its Weight Management program, the council is offering some dieting tips designed to shed those extra love handles one acquired this holiday season, love handles that even the most affectionate person really doesn't like at the very least.

The council points out that 20 percent or 33 million adults are afflicted with the disease obesity, more commonly referred to as being overweight. With this extra body weight comes an increased chance for the obese person to acquire high blood pressure, hypertension, coronary heart disease, some cancers and other medical conditions such as arthritis.

One leading obesity researcher and professor at Rockefeller University in New York, waist, flank and abdomen (the so-called "beer-belly"), the hazards of being obese are multiplied.

Overweight persons, Hirsch further reported, causes life span to be shorter. Life span is considerably shorter when obesity becomes a problem in a person's youth.

To combat this obesity disease, the Michigan Dairy Council is suggesting a balanced, low-calorie diet. It is this type of diet, the group maintains, that will produce effective, long-term weight loss.

"For some reason, we become programmed at a certain weight, even though it may be hazardous at an upper weight level," said Hirsch. "No matter what biological factors are involved in weight regulation, the only way we seem to be able to modify body weight is by changes in lifestyle which increase energy use (through exercise) and decrease food intake."

The council points out that while being overweight is a health hazard, following many fad diets can be more health threatening. The group illus-

- It suits the tastes and habits of the dieter.
- It includes foods readily available both at home and away from home.
- It promotes life-long eating habits.

To determine how many calories one should take in each day, the council has developed a mathematical formula. In computing the number, the group uses the fact that 3,500 calories equals one pound of body fat.

To determine the ideal calorie intake on the diet, multiply the desired weight by 15. Thus, an ideal weight of 150 pounds could be attained by consuming 2250 calories each day. To remove one pound of body fat per week consume 500 calories less each day, or in this case, take in only 1750 calories.

The Dairy Council is also offering a free book, Your Calorie Guide. The book lists most common foods and their calorie count and even lists numbers for soft drinks, candy bars and fast-food restaurants.

To obtain the booklet write: Dairy Council of Michigan, 30600 Telegraph Road, Suite 3380, Birmingham, MI 48010. The group adds that weight reduction, though not fun, can be successful.

"To determine the ideal calorie intake on the diet, multiply the desired weight by 15. . . to remove one pound of body fat per week, consume 500 calories less each day. . ."

Jules Hirsch, explained that the human body generally maintains a 30-day supply of fuel or about 15 percent of the total body weight. However, when this fuel supply becomes greater than normal, the body holding capabilities are expanded and the body begins to acquire excess fat tissues.
